Please enjoy your visit to Fenway Park. We believe there is a family atmosphere here that has been traditional over the years. Generations of families from all over New England have come to Fenway Park since it opened in 1912. They have been a cornerstone in making the Red Sox one of the strongest franchises in baseball.

Actually, Boston has been a key franchise in baseball since the American League was founded in 1901. Entering the 1985 season 1,095 players had appeared in at least one game for the Red Sox, many of them among the most famous in the game.

The Boston entry in the American League's first season in 1901 was known as the Pilgrims and played its games at the Huntington Avenue grounds where Northeastern University stands. In 1907 the Red Sox nickname was adopted and in 1912 Fenway Park became the new Red Sox home field.

Although there have been cosmetic changes at Fenway Park, the playing field is virtually the same today as it was in 1934. The famous "Green Monster" wall, the intriguing angles and corners around the outfield, and the closeness of the crowd to the action are reasons why it is such a captivating place to watch baseball.

Fenway Park has been the scene of many of baseball's most historic moments and finest individual performances. The loyalty of Red Sox fans is legendary and has helped enhance the Red Sox Fenway Park success story. We extend our thanks to Red Sox fans everywhere.

In the winter of 1933-34 new owner Thomas A. Yawkey put the park through a major reconstruction phase. The 23-foot-tall screen was put above the left field wall in 1936 and the bullpens were constructed in front of the bleachers in 1940. Arc lights were installed in 1947 and the messageboard in centerfield was part of a construction project after the 1975 season that included a rebuilding of the left field wall, with padding added around the outfield walls as a safety measure.

The diagram on page 42 shows the location of all Fenway Park facilities and the maps of page 44 show the various methods and routes leading here. We urge you to use the public transportation facilities as often as possible to come to and from the ballpark.

#1 JOHN FRANCIS (JOHN) McNAMARA

Age: 52, Turns 53 June 4; Born: June 4, 1932, Sacramento Cal. Ht.: 5-10; Wt.: 175. Blue eyes, Brown hair. Bats and Throws: Right. Home: Cincinnati, Ohio. Married Ellen Goode.

On Oct. 18 1984 John McNamara was named the 36th manager of the Red Sox. He replaced Ralph Houk who retired after four years at Boston. McNamara will be starting his 12th full year as a major league manager. Only Sparky Anderson (Detroit) and Gene Mauch (Angels) hold seniority over him among A.L. managers. John has managed three current A.L. managers: Doug Rader, Pat Corrales and Tony LaRussa.

Entering 1985 McNamara's major league record was 751-805, including 248-251 in three years in the A.L.

McNamara managed the California Angels the past two seasons. In 1984 the Angels finished in a second place tie with Minnesota at 81-81. In 1983 injuries crippled the Angels and they finished tied for fifth at 70-92. They were in first place as late as July 10, 1983.

McNamara was a minor league manager for nine years in the Kansas City A's organization before being named a coach with the A's in 1968 when they moved to Oakland. He has been in the major leagues ever since as either a manager or coach. John made his major league managerial debut with Oakland when he replaced Hank Bauer, Sept. 19, 1969. He led the A's to a second place finish in 1970.

His coaching stints include San Francisco (1971-73) and California (1978). He managed a young San Diego team from 1974 through May 28, 1977. The Padres record improved each year.

McNamara piloted Cincinnati from 1979 through July 20, 1982. He led the Reds to the N.L. West title in 1979 and in 1980 they finished only 3½ games out of first. In the strike-shortened 1981 season the Reds had the best overall record in baseball although they did not appear in post-season play.

McNamara was a minor league catcher and also pitched in 14 games over four years. He attended Sacramento State College and spent two years in the military.

ROGER CLEMENS and DENNIS 'OIL CAN' BOYD

Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd

by Nick Cafardo

By mid-May, Roger Clemens and Dennis 'Oil Can' Boyd had become the darlings of Red Sox fans. In the centerfield bleachers, fans commemorated every strikeout with a "K" sign, a ritual begun for Clemens last season, adopted for Oil Can with one slight revision — a red can painted atop the K.

For over 10 years, Digital computers have managed the scoreboard at Fenway Park.

That's a lot of fly balls, ground balls, pinch hits, pitchouts, line drives, lineups and excitement to keep on top of.

But then, for over 25 years, Digital has been helping people, departments and entire companies work more efficiently.

It's this kind of expertise that enables us to design computer systems for many of America's largest corporations.

Not to mention America's favorite pastime.

Clemens and Boyd, a pair of right-handers, were 1-2 in the early American League strikeout race. A 22 and 25-year-old had become the cornerstones of one of the youngest and most promising pitching staffs in baseball.

The future — in the eyes of Clemens and Boyd — was now. Boyd spoke of making the All-Star team and pitching in the World Series this year, as well as in years to come. Clemens dared to be great every time he stepped onto the mound.

"I've had a lot of challenges in my life already," said Clemens. "I've already experienced the pressures. I've been handed the ball in the big games, and I've produced. Friends and coaches tell me a championship follows me where ever I go. Maybe there's something to that. I've got to believe there is."

Clemens saw the fruits of his labors while pitching for the University of Texas. He beat the University of Alabama, 4-3, in the NCAA title game in 1983. The Red Sox had already made him their No. 1 choice, the 19th selection overall in the June draft. He made the transition from college ball to the pro game without a hitch, going 3-1 (1.24 ERA) at Winter Haven (A) with 36 strikeouts in 29 innings, before moving up to New Britain (4-1, 1.38), which he eventually led to the Eastern League championship. Again, he pitched the big game, shutting out Lynn with a three-hitter, 6-0. In 1983, then, he pitched 254 innings with 259 strikeouts and a combined 22-7 record.

In 1984, he was the main focus of spring training. But following a couple of shaky outings, the Red Sox thought it best for Clemens to spend time in AAA (Pawtucket). He met that challenge as well and shortly proved he was ready for the big leagues. In seven games he was 2-3 with a 1.93 ERA, striking out 50 and walking only 14. He was called up to the big leagues May 11. Pawtucket later captured the International League's Governors Cup. A championship followed him once more.

Clemens, who grew up in Dayton, O., but later moved to Houston, went 9-4 with a 4.32 ERA (126 strikeouts in 131.1 innings) before a right forearm injury, during an Aug. 31 Labor Day weekend game in Cleveland, shortened his season. The organization held its collective breath, but rest proved the cure-all.

Clemens was named the A.L. Pitcher of the Month in August, compiling a 4-0 mark with a 2.89 ERA with 52 strikeouts in 43.2 innings. The streak was highlighted by a 15-strikeout, no-walk, 11-1 victory over the Kansas City Royals at Fenway Park Aug. 21. "That was a big thrill. It's fun to strike out that many. But it's more fun to win.

"I took it easy in the off-season. It was really the first time I had completely rested. That's why it took me a little while to get going. But I'm usually a slow starter anyway."

Clemens battled early-season blister and hamstring problems this year. By the second inning in most of his starts, he had already developed a blister on his index finger. But Roger wasn't about to leave early. "I just ignored it. It meant that I was throwing the ball hard. Part of being a great pitcher is learning to deal with pain, and to build up a tolerance to it. I won't let anything like that bother me."

Clemens is compelled and driven to achieve. He worked hard in spring training with pitching coach Bill Fischer on a change-up, and sought to improve his breaking pitch, feeling he needed to show hitters a different speed other than his often unhittable 95 mph-plus fastball. But Roger is still a power pitcher. If he is to be beaten, it will be with his fastball, and he suspects he won't be beaten often.

"When Roger has his stuff, he can beat anyone," said Red Sox coach Tony Torchia. "And with his fastball, he can strike out 10 against any team in baseball. Jim Palmer won 19 games when he was a teenager. He was a power pitcher then, still learning how to pitch. Just because you're learning, doesn't mean you can't be a big winner."

But there haven't been many better bands than The Beatles, funnier comedy teams than the Marx Brothers, and better outfields than the current Red Sox. We're talking about entertainment here, and as talented as the above-mentioned individuals are or were, it was the union of their talents, the unique ability to play off each other, which made them great entertainers and terrific entertainment.

Baseball is not much different than music or comedy.

"The presence that we have," explained Rice early this season, "forces opposing ball clubs to make a decision as to whom they want to pitch to, even when one of us is going bad. I remember one series with Oakland last year, for example, when they walked Evans to get to me, and I hit a grand slam."

Pitching to the three Red Sox outfielders, who most of the time have batted in succession in the two, three, and four slots in the batting order, is akin to running a gauntlet. Evans, Rice, and Armas are standing sixty feet, six inches away brandishing war clubs, and a pitcher has to try and run baseballs past them.

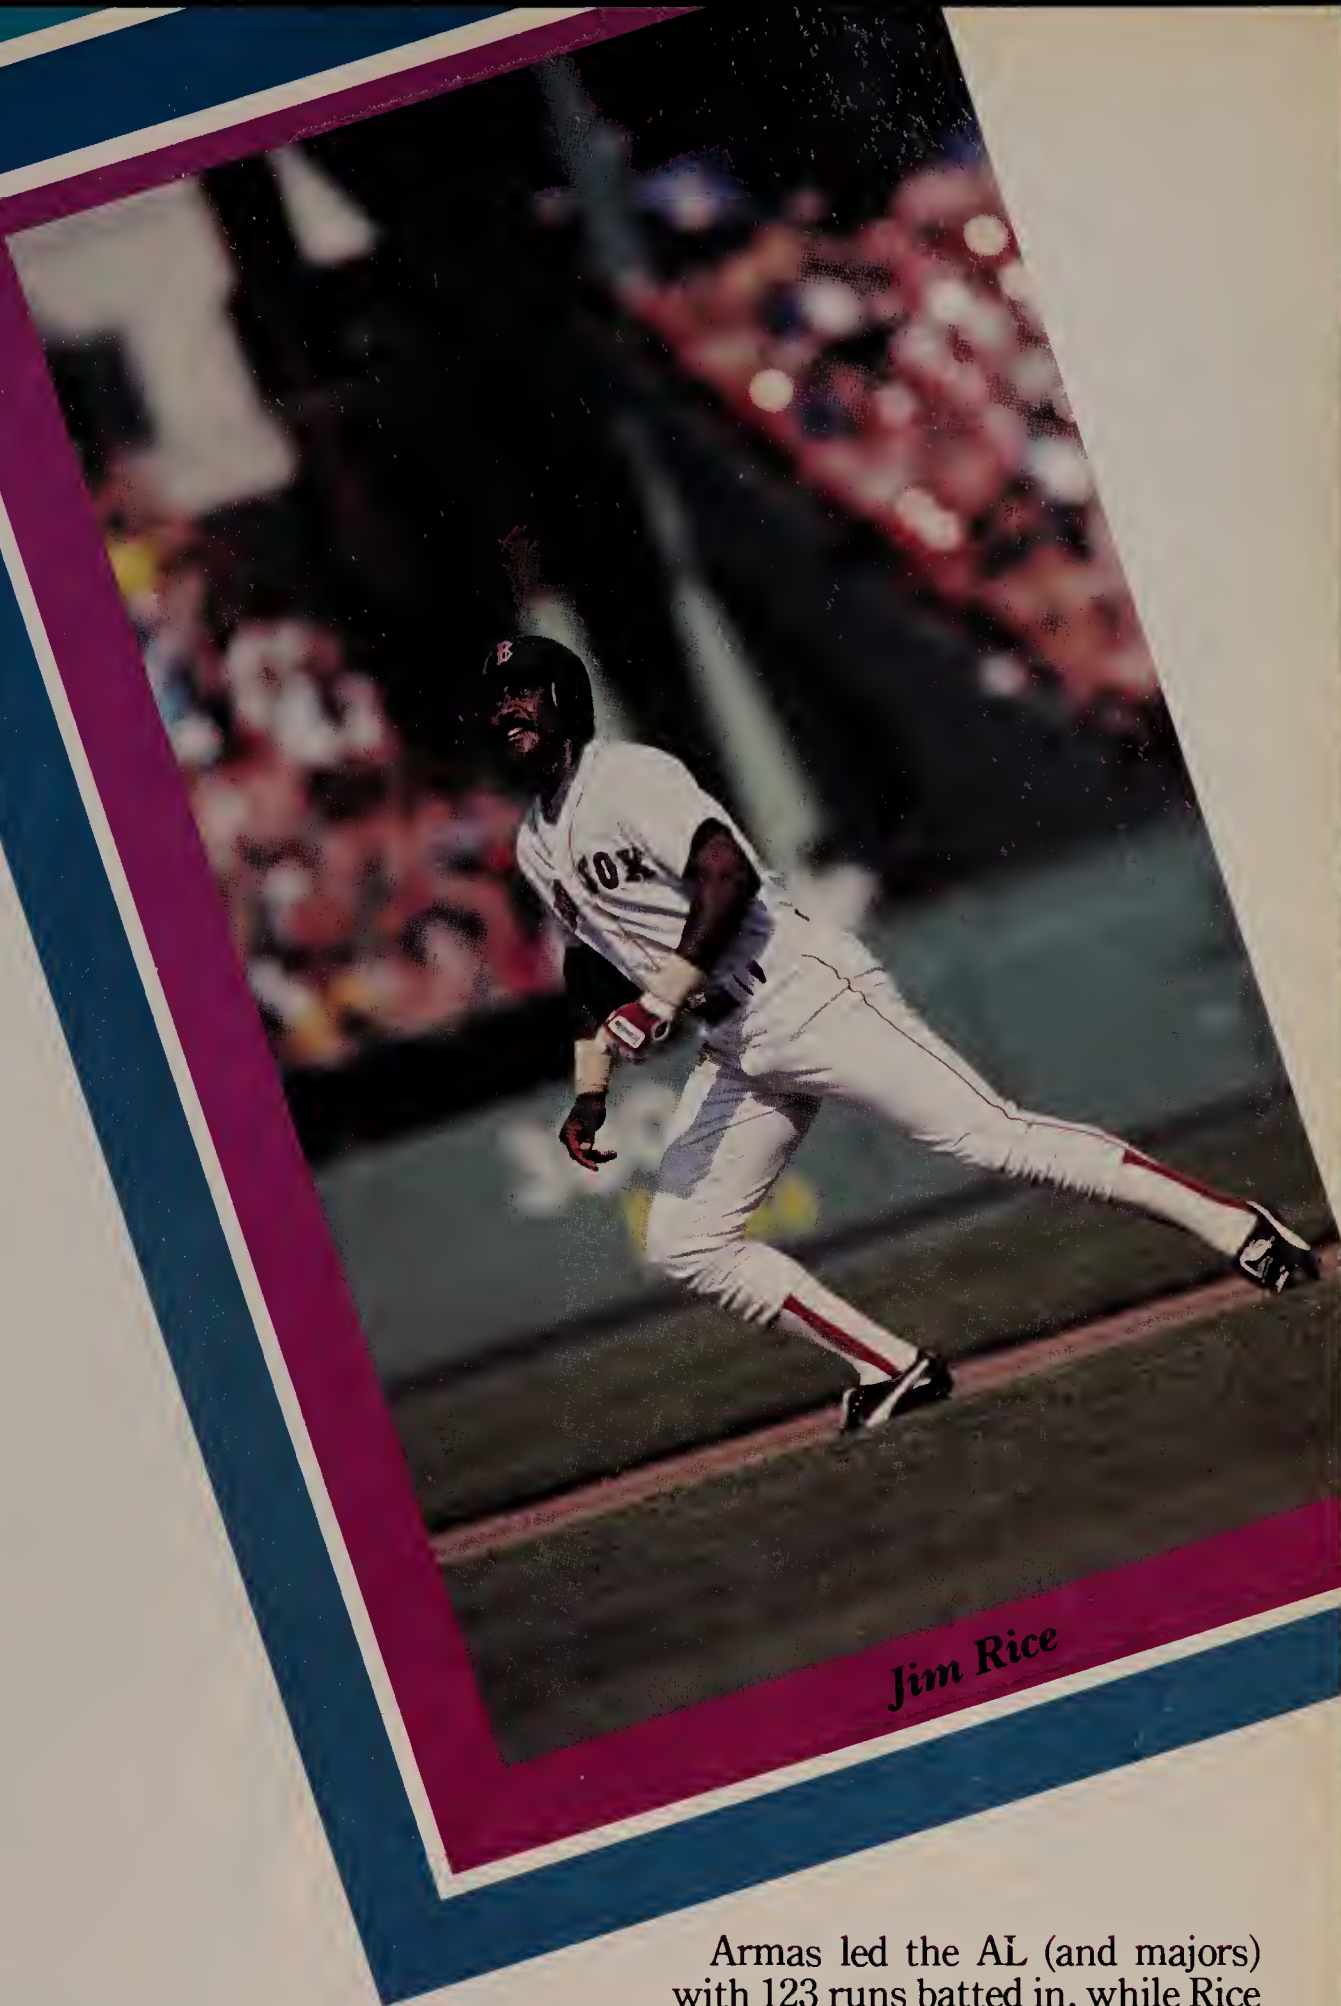

Last year the three outfielders swatted 103 baseballs, which were never seen again, to the nether regions of American League ballparks. In 1983 the trio hit 97 out of sight for a total of 200 in two years. When Evans, Rice, and Armas all homered on Opening Day against the Yankees this season, it marked the fifth time each had hit at least one homer in the same game. One game in 1983 they ganged up on the Orioles' Dennis Martinez and blasted four off him.

The 103 homers made them just the seventh group of regular outfielders to combine for 100 homers in a season. They also became only the third outfield in major league history with three 100-RBI men in the same season, and the first in 55 years. The other two were the 1929 Cubs outfield of Hack Wilson (159), Riggs Stephenson (110), and Kiki Cuyler (102); and the 1921 Tigers outfield of Harry Heilmann (139), Bobby Veach (128), and Ty Cobb (101).

Armas led the AL (and majors) with 123 runs batted in, while Rice was second with 122 and Evans finished with 104. Their combined total of 349 was the fifth highest by an outfield in major league history behind the 1930 Cubs (392 by Wilson, Cuyler, and Stephenson); the 1929 Cubs (371 by Wilson, Stephenson, and Cuyler); the 1921 Tigers (368 by Heilmann, Veach, and Cobb); and the 1962 Dodgers (357 by Tommy Davis, Frank Howard, and Willie Davis).

To put the feat in perspective, there have been twenty-nine 300-RBI outfields in modern major league history. More than half of them played during the first years of the lively ball era (1921-32) when runs were as cheap as pesos. Only eight post-World War II outfielders have accomplished the feat, including the 1979 Red Sox outfield of Rice, Evans, and Fred Lynn, which amassed 310 RBI. Since the '62 Dodgers, the only other outfield in nearly a quarter of a century to collect 300 RBI was the 1979 Brewers trio of Gorman Thomas, Sixto Lezcano, and Ben Oglivie, with 305.

There is another thing which makes the outfield of Evans, Rice, and Armas unique: It is only the second outfield in major league history comprised entirely of reigning or former home run champions. Rice led the AL in homers in 1977-1978 and 1983, while Evans and Armas tied for the championship in 1981 and Armas won it outright last season.

The other outfield with three home run champions was the 1912 Cubs with Frank "Wildfire" Schulte, who won the title in 1911; Jimmy Sheckard, who won in 1903; and Tommy Leach, who won in 1902.

But there is much more to the Red Sox outfield than homers and RBI. Rice is a lifetime .303 hitter and one of just six players in major league history who has averaged .300, 30 homers, and 100 RBI per season over the course of his career. Evans ranked in the top ten in every major offensive category last year except stolen bases and batting average. Armas is the smartest and best baserunner on the club, instinctively knowing when he can take the extra base, and he also provides valuable leadership in the clubhouse.

Defensively all three are above-average outfielders. Dwight Evans has won seven Gold Gloves for fielding excellence in rightfield, and Armas and Rice rank among the best at their positions in center and left. Rice has been on the All-Star team six times, and Evans and Armas have each made it twice.

Furthermore, all three are still in their prime years and should continue to maul AL pitchers for several more seasons. Evans will be 33 when 1985 ends, and Armas and Rice will both be 32. So skeptics who claim the three Red Sox outfielders are not likely to surpass, much less duplicate, their 1984 feats may be in for a surprise.

"I didn't hit for a month and a half last year," noted Evans earlier this season. "I know Tony can hit for a better average than he did last year, and Jimmy was the low man among us with 28 homers and is capable of hitting 40 to 45. So why can't we do it again?"

RED SOX GAMES COME TO YOU ON RADIO AND T.V.
BY WAY OF CAMPBELL
SPORTS, T.V. 38 AND NESN CABLE.

Ken Coleman
and Joe Castiglione

Ned Martin
and Bob Montgomery

The Campbell Red Sox Baseball Radio Network is again carrying every Red Sox game on radio in 1985 with Ken Coleman and Joe Castiglione sharing the microphone for the third season. The partnership between the Red Sox and Campbell Sports is also entering its third year and is slated to continue at least through 1989. WPLM-FM in Plymouth, MA is the flagship station of a network of about 70 stations that blankets New England.

Coleman has more than 30 years of broadcasting experience and has covered the Red Sox on radio and TV for 16 years. The Quincy, MA native began his career broadcasting the Rutland (VT) Royals of the now defunct Northern League. He then went to Cleveland where he did the Browns (NFL) for 14 seasons and the Indians for 10.

In 1966 Ken returned to Boston for his first stint with the Red Sox (1966-74) on both radio and TV. After covering the Cincinnati Reds on TV for four years he came back to Boston once again for the 1979 season on radio, and has been here since.

Ken has announced seven NFL championship games on network TV and also did the 1967 World Series on NBC. He has been involved with the Jimmy Fund since 1966, and is now its coordinator for donor relations.

Castiglione is in his third season on Red Sox radio. Like Coleman, he previously covered the Cleveland Indians (1979-80-82) on both radio and TV. He worked the Milwaukee Brewers' games on cable TV in 1981. The Hamden, CT native has announced Cleveland Cavaliers (NBA) on cable, and did college basketball for New England Sports Network this past winter. He is a graduate of Colgate University.

Red Sox fans will receive complete television coverage again this season, with 73 games scheduled on TV 38 and 86 on New England Sports Network (NESN)(cable). The other three games will be on network television.

TV 38, and its New England network, is in its 11th season covering Red Sox baseball, and Ned Martin and Bob Montgomery are together for the fourth year.

Martin has been covering the Red Sox on TV and radio for 25 consecutive seasons, including the last seven with TV 38. He began his broadcasting career in Charleston, WV, covering the American Association team there for five years. He joined Curt Gowdy in Boston for the 1961 season and has been here ever since, working with 10 different partners in that time.

Only Ernie Harwell of the Tigers (26 years) has been with one club for more consecutive seasons. The Duke graduate worked the A.L. playoffs on CBS radio four years, and also did the 1975 World Series on TV for NBC.

Ned is also an accomplished football announcer, having done play-by-play for the Patriots (1965), Dartmouth (7 years) Harvard (6 years), and Yale (2 years). He served in the marine corps in World War II.

Montgomery has been on the television team four seasons. He was a valuable reserve catcher for the Red Sox during his playing career. Bob signed with Boston in 1962 and came to the majors in 1970.

He appeared in 387 games, before an arm injury forced his retirement during spring training in 1980. Montgomery did a local radio talk show, as well as some work on the Red Sox radio broadcasts, prior to joining the television crew.

New England Sports Network (NESN) is covering the Red Sox for the second year. This season Martin and Montgomery will also handle the announcing duties for NESN's 86 game schedule. NESN rebroadcasts each of its Red Sox games as a convenience for subscribers who may have missed the live telecast. Evening games are rebroadcast at 11:30 p.m., while afternoon games are shown again at 7:30 p.m.

It's Easy to Keep Score

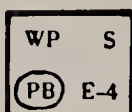

Baseball Shorthand, as used by the news media to render every game more enjoyable to baseball enthusiasts. All players are numbered and all plays recorded by symbols. For symbols and example of system, see below.

CODE NUMBER OF PLAYERS AS FOLLOWS

Pitcher	1	Second Baseman	4	Left Fielder	7
Catcher	2	Third Baseman	5	Center Fielder	8
First Baseman	3	Shortstop	6	Right Fielder	9

SYMBOLS FOR PLAYS

Single	—	Fielder's Choice	FC	Passed Ball	PB
Double	=	Hit by Pitcher	HP	Balk	BK
Triple	≡	Wild Pitch	WP	Struck Out	K
Home Run	≡≡	Stolen Base	SB	Base on Balls	BB
Reached base on error	E	Sacrifice	SAC	Force Out	FO

The lower lefthand corner of the scoring block should be considered as home plate. Progress is counter-clockwise with progress to first base indicated in lower righthand corner, to second in upper righthand corner, to third in upper lefthand corner and to home in lower left. In example to left, batter reached first on an error by the second baseman, stole second, went to third on a wild pitch and scored on a passed ball. It is convenient to encircle all runs as shown so that scoring plays may be seen at a glance.

FENWAY PARK GROUND RULES

- Foul poles, screen poles and screen on top of left field fence are outside of playing field.
- Ball going through scoreboard, either on the bound or fly: 2 Bases.
- Fly ball striking left center field wall to right of line behind flag pole: Home Run.
- Fly ball striking wall or flag pole and bounding into bleachers: Home Run.
- Fly ball striking line or right of same on wall in right center: Home Run.
- Fly ball striking wall left of line and bounding into bullpen: Home Run.
- Ball sticking in bullpen screen: 2 Bases.
- Batted or thrown ball remaining behind or under canvas or in cylinder: 2 Bases.
- Ball striking bevel on the wall between the foul pole in left field and the corner back of the flag pole, and bounding into stands or out of park: 2 Bases.

"DRIVE YOUR FRIENDS TO THINK!"

The decision not to drink and drive is one you have to make for yourself and one you may have to help others make.

Friends can pressure each other into getting behind the wheel when they shouldn't - but they can also convince them not to drive drunk. If you are drinking, or your friends are, make sure there is a sober driver to take you home. If not, call a cab, or a friend. Do whatever you must to keep a drunk from behind the wheel.

Roadblocks, police patrols and tougher laws are pulling more drunk drivers off the highway but we need to work together to end this tragedy.

Sadly, citizens are dying on the highway every day. For your own safety and for your friends: "drive yourself to think."

Unfortunately, Evans got off to another of his typically slow starts this season. But he has hit between .292 and .296 three of the last four years — missing only when he was hurt during the second half of the 1983 season — and has hit 21-32 homers six of the last seven years. Evans has averaged 27 homers, 100 runs, and 91 walks the last four years despite missing part of one because of the strike and part of another because of an injury.

Armas came to the Red Sox from the Athletics in the trade for Carney Lansford after the 1982 season with a reputation as a low-average hitter. The A's computer also predicted Armas' power would be minimized in Fenway Park. (The A's have since junked the computer.) The Red Sox wanted three things from Armas: 30 homers, 100 RBI, and good defense in centerfield. He gave them more than that, providing 36 homers, 107 RBI, and excellent defense even though he hit only .218, the lowest average of any player in major league history to drive in 100 runs.

Before the 1984 season Armas devoted himself to hitting guru Walt Hriniak, who had turned Evans' career around. He hiked his average 50 points to .268, belted a league-leading 43 homers and drove in 123 runs, both career highs. By virtue of being a better hitter, Armas drove in 57 runs last year without homers compared to just 36 in 1983.

Rice's .280 average was the lowest of his major league career, and his .467 slugging percentage was the second lowest. He needs only an average year in 1985 to improve.

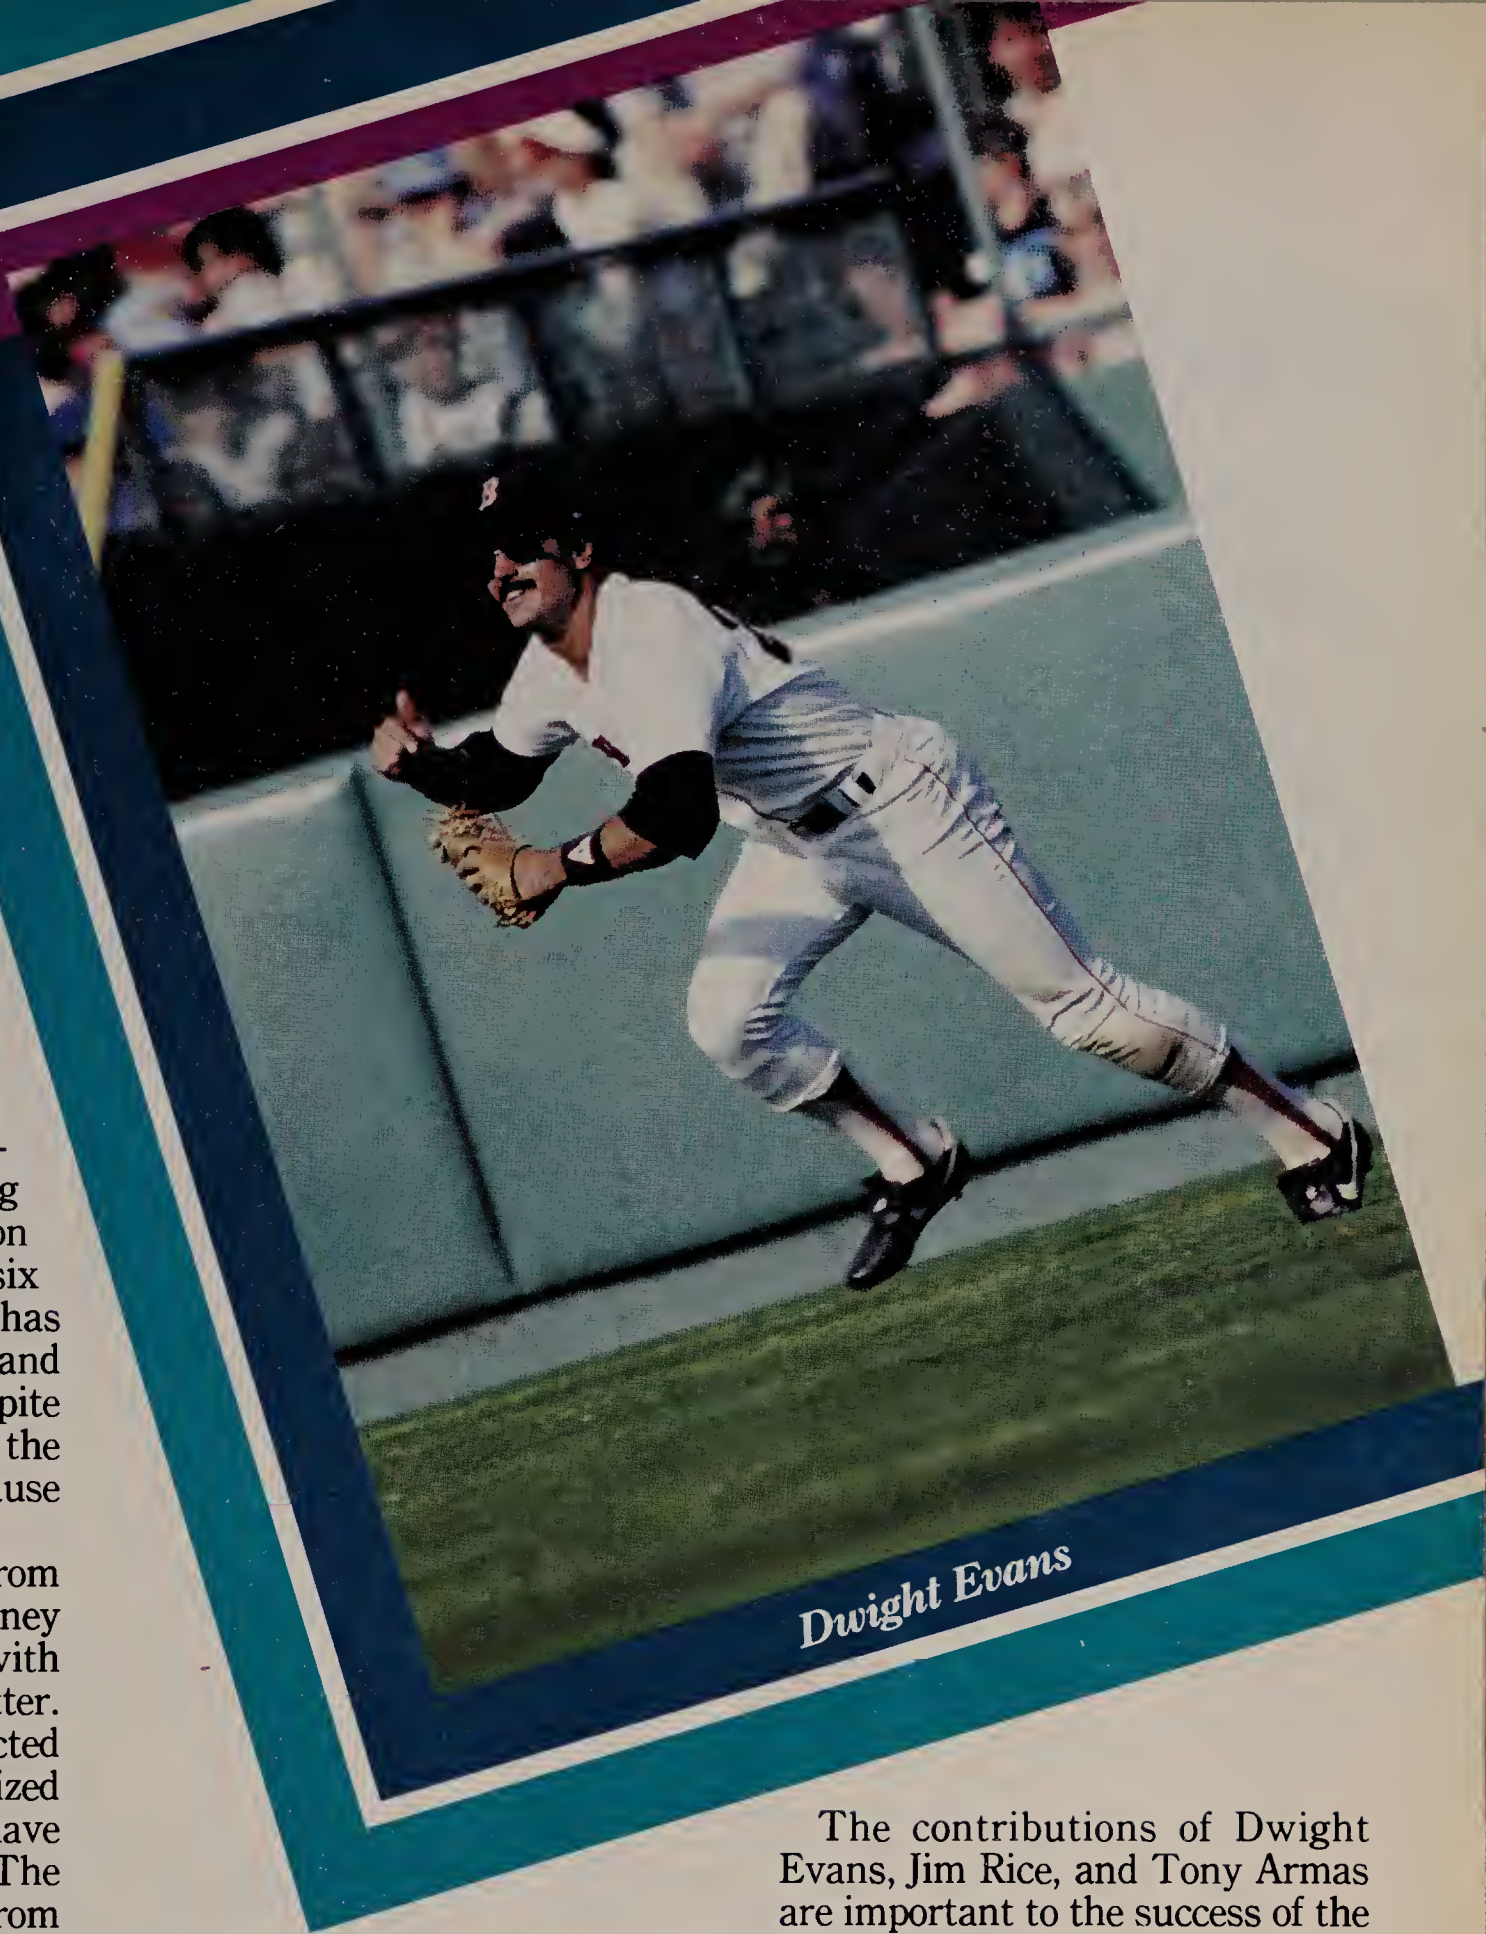

So there is little reason to fear one of the greatest outfielders in major league history cannot come close to, or even surpass, its 1984 achievements. Only injuries could hold them back. But even there the three outfielders have a reputation for durability. Rice has missed an average of 10 games a year over his career, Evans has missed an average of 11 over the last seven years, and Armas an average of 10 over the last five seasons.

The contributions of Dwight Evans, Jim Rice, and Tony Armas are important to the success of the Red Sox. Two years ago, for example, the club won only seven games in which none of the three drove in at least one run.

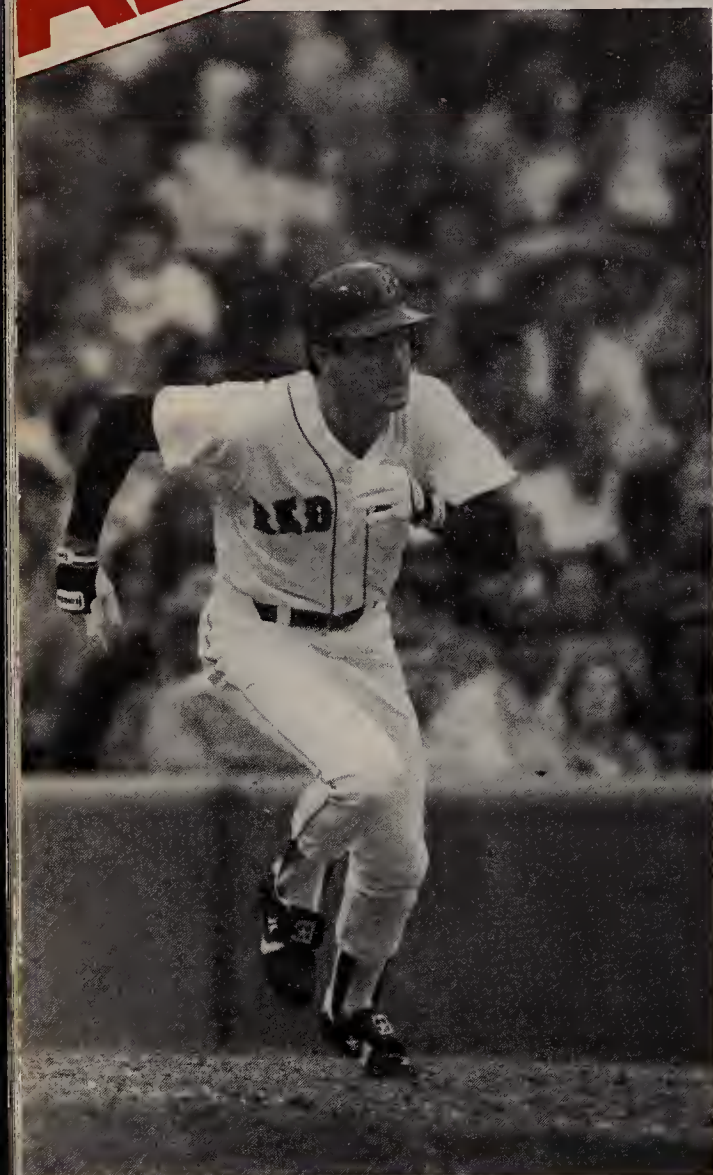

But then, productive outfielders have always been essential to the success of the Red Sox. So if Evans, Rice, and Armas ground into a double play or strike out, as they are wont to do, just remember the 1906 Red Sox outfield of John Hayden, John Hoey, and Chick Stahl, which combined for a mighty five homers and 88 runs batted in.

The Red Sox lost 105 games and finished dead last, 45½ games out of first place. And that, dear fans, was not entertainment.

Declare your independence. Bust out. Take off.

And escape to the high country in OFF ROAD's small 4X4 of the year.* It's got the highest running ground clearance in its class. So you can ride high over obstacles—not into them. With solid steel skid plates under the transfer case and fuel tank, you've got two less things to worry about.

Kick up some dust and leave the pack coughing with the most powerful engine ever built for a truck in its class. Bar none. The 116 powerful horses in its 2.4 liter engine, fed by Electronic Fuel Injection, give it the muscle to do it.

You'll not only run faster, you'll unshackle yourself from most repair bills,

Examine the way it's built and you can see why. Double wall construction can take the slams of a 1,400-pound payload. Its suspension system with solid front-and-rear axles has been proven off-road for reliability and durability. Former Red Sox Stars one of the league's best throwing arms and twice led the league in assists.

Dom led off those potent Red Sox lineups in the 1940's and early 50's, combining with Johnny Pesky to set the table for Ted and Rudy (York) and Vern (Stephens) and the rest of the gunners in those days.

DiMaggio got on base, all right. He led the league in runs scored in 1950 and 1951. He was a .298 lifetime hitter and consistency was his jewel. His rookie year average was .301 and in his final full year — 1952 — he batted .294. Six times he scored over 100 runs, he stole 100 career bases (in a non-stealing era) and the only time he struck out more than he walked was in 1952 (61-57). He retired voluntarily in May of 1953.

NOW: Dom DiMaggio is also retired and enjoying it in 1985. At age 68, he and his wife, Emily, maintain two homes, the summer one in Marion, Massachusetts, and the winter residence at Delray Beach, Florida.

His post-career business, the Delaware Valley Corporation, Dom DiMaggio, Inc. in Lawrence, Massachusetts is now headed by his son. It is a basic manufacturing business for industrial fiber and textile machinery which supplies the automotive industry.

Dominic checks by the office occasionally to go over the books and mail and "get in my son's way." It is the good life. Thoughts and memories of baseball, while still very close, are pretty far away.

QUOTES: "Looking back, I guess the biggest event in my career was playing in the 1946 World Series against the Cardinals. We were such a good team that season, with everyone back from the war. About all we needed that year was a top-flight catcher. We had everything else.

"One thing has always bothered me about that Series. In one game, I forget which, I should have thrown Marty Marion out at second base. My throw acted like a knuckle ball and it skidded and hopped to Bobby Doerr instead of taking the true bounce. Had I gotten Marion, I would eventually have had five runners thrown out in the Series for a record. I still think about that.

"As for playing centerfield in Fenway, I liked it. It wasn't an easy place to play, what with the caroms off the left-center field wall. And it is improved now since they have filled in that triangle at the base of the flag pole. I played fairly shallow, I guess, but not to a point where I felt uncomfortable. I think I was quoted once as saying the fences are my friends: that was so. I felt I had control of all corners.

"And hitting at the top of that lineup was fun. I'd get on, Pesky would get on, and the big guys would drive us in. There were times, though, when Pesky would wear me out on the hit-and-run. I'd get on, and look to John, and sure enough, his fingers went alongside that nose. That was his sign for the hit-and-run. And we used it a lot.

"When I came up to the big leagues a ballplayer who wore glasses was an oddity. Oh, there were a couple, but guys that probably should have worn them didn't because they did not want to be thought of as 'sissies'.

"I wore them, though. And it pleased me that after I played awhile more and more young players started to wear them. Glasses hardly ever bothered me although they weren't comfortable on wet, misty days. Heck, it took an Act of Congress to get me into the Navy when I enlisted in '42 wearing glasses.

"Baseball today? It's a good game now. But it always will be, because it's the best game going. There are good players now but there should be more. I think the competition of the other professional sports for the young athlete has stolen a lot of good baseball prospects.

"Another thing, and I feel strongly about it. I believe in our day there was more desire to play, and that pride in being a major leaguer meant more than money back then. Now maybe money means too much. It seems to me that the obligation to the youth of the country and the moral aspects of the game appear to have taken a back seat."

Other DiMaggio positions:

"Baseball must do everything in its power to eliminate the number one problem, drugs."

"Expansion has helped pitching more than hitting."

"Sure these players are strong today. But we had a lot of them, too. Try Foxx and Williams and Ted Lyons and Cochrane and Feller and Greenberg. They and a lot of others could play in today's game."

"Years ago, though, Fenway Park was a great place to play. The fans appreciated the home team's talent, and you felt they were with you. But they also acknowledged — as they do today — an outstanding performance by a visiting player. So when the San Francisco team of the Pacific Coast League wanted to sell my contract to the majors, I'm glad it was Boston."

And so was Boston.

DENNIS 'OIL CAN' BOYD

While Clemens was over-powering the league, Boyd was finessing them. The 145-pounder was earning respect with an attitude which defied defeat, and understood only winning. His antics on the mound were harrasing to opposing players. He'd get the "punch-out" and play it up with gestures. It is Boyd's colorful style, with the talent to back it up.

"I create my own atmosphere. Some of my teammates have told me they enjoy playing behind me. Hopefully, I can instill confidence in the people around me. I want to be the pitcher this team can depend on. Everytime I go out, I want the guys to say, 'we can win this ballgame because The Can's pitching'."

Confidence didn't come easy. After a 4-8, 1983, splitting time between Boston and Pawtucket, Boyd's confidence was at an all-time low early in the 1984 campaign. After five games, he was 0-3 with a 7.36 ERA and former manager Ralph Houk wanted Boyd to work out his problems in Pawtucket. The process lasted five games, and following his recall May 30, he went 12-9 and became the most dependable Red Sox starter, averaging seven innings per start.

Boyd, the pride of Meridian, Miss., didn't stop at dependable. Like Clemens, Boyd also wants to be the best, a quality instilled in him by his father, James, who played many years in the old Negro Leagues.

He worked hard in spring training developing and mastering five pitches, including one he termed a "back-door screwball." He also mastered umpteen speeds, which adds vastly to his effectiveness.

"He's the most difficult pitcher to catch," says catcher Rich Gedman. "You just don't know from pitch to pitch at what speed he's going to throw at. I'd hate to be up there hitting against him."

Fischer remains astonished at what Boyd can do with his slight build. "He's learning to pitch, and he still makes mistakes which we're working with him on. But it's incredible how hard he throws, and what his ball can do, for a guy who weighs only 145 pounds. I think he'll be one heck of a pitcher."

Boyd says his maturity has simply stemmed from adapting to the big league environment. "I'm over the jitters and the nervousness I used to have. Now, I'm confident. I want to pitch all the time, even when it's not my turn. I think I've been tough. I'm taking my share of the plate, and guys know they can't be leaning over taking it away from me. But I'm not content, yet. There's a lot more that I want."

Boyd turned out to be a bargain. The Red Sox drafted him in the 16th round of the 1980 June draft. Signed by scout Edward Scott, he had a successful career at Jackson State University (Miss.) where he starred for former major league pitcher Scipio Spinks.

"I was a power pitcher. My coach used to tell me I threw too hard for my arm-strength. I could bring it over 90. But I had to change and learn to be a smart pitcher if I was going to make it to the big leagues."

Manager John McNamara is excited about the future of the Red Sox pitching staff with Clemens and Boyd. "They are two of the best young pitchers I've ever had. They're enthusiastic with a great desire to win. They're still learning, but they've caught on very quickly. They've pitched very well, and with a lot of poise."

As for the Fenway fan reaction, Boyd said: "It pumps me up. I look forward to coming here to pitch and putting on a good show for fans."

Boyd was looking forward to his family coming to Boston to watch him pitch, most of them for the first time in the big leagues. "I can't express how excited I am about that."

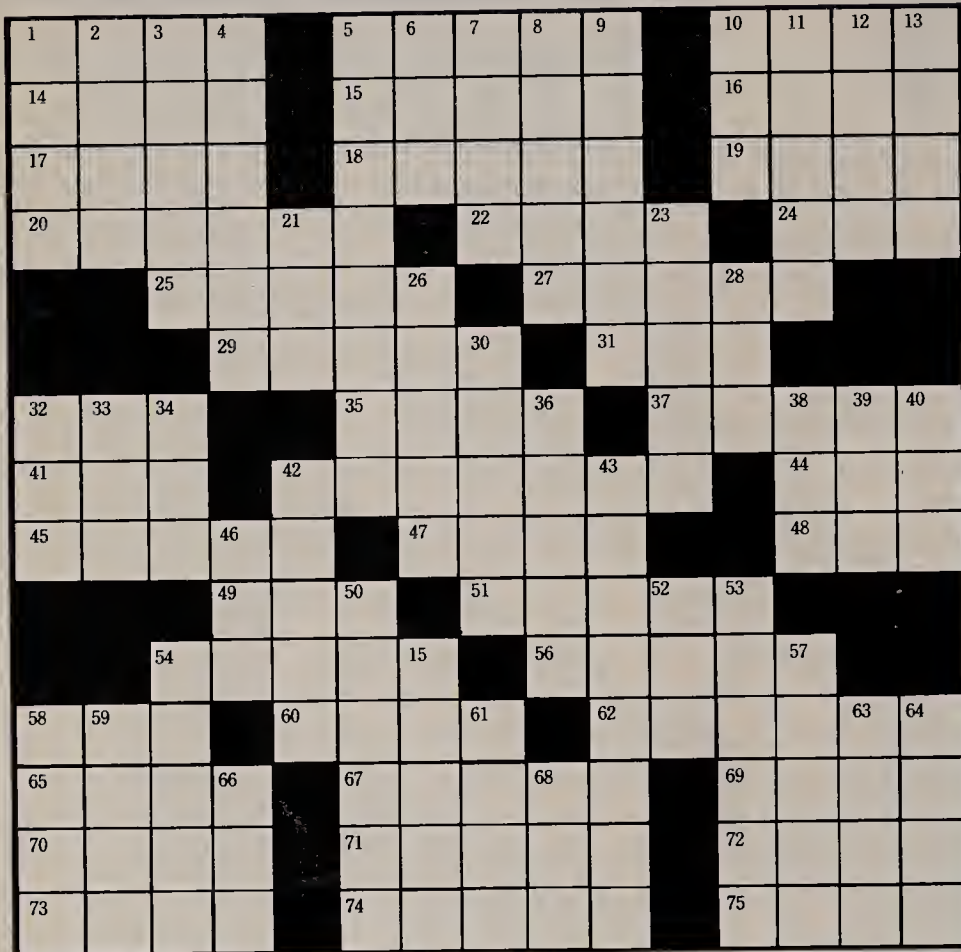

Clemens, who married the former Debbie Godfrey in the off-season, is still experiencing the thrill of major league life. "There are parks I've still never pitched in. I'm still rather new to this. But I can experience those things and still win. I know I can."

Behind the Scenes with Charlie Moss and Rich Zawacki

Physical therapist Rich Zawacki works on Roger Clemens

Moss, with the club since 1975, and Zawacki, who joined the Sox on a part-time basis in 1981, serve primarily as liaison between the players and team physician Dr. Arthur M. Pappas.

"We deal directly with the players, particularly in spring training," Moss said. "But the medical decisions are made by Dr. Pappas. It is not my position to diagnose any problems.

"We try to keep the players on the field but keep the doctor informed on the players' physical problems," Moss explained. "We don't rush to him with every little hang-nail but we do try to make sure that any player with a physical problem sees him as soon as possible."

There is constant telephone contact between Moss and Dr. Pappas when the club is on the road. The Red Sox can call on the team physicians in whatever city they are visiting or return an ailing player to Boston where Dr. Pappas, team physician for the past eight years, and Zawacki can take over.

Moss, a native of Kimball, Nebraska, earned his bachelor's degree from Nebraska Wesleyan in biology and physical education, and his master's degree in athletic training from the University of Arizona.

A former assistant trainer at Northeastern, he believes that trainers can understand and relate better to the players and both their personal and physical problems than most.

"We don't talk much with the media or pass information along to the manager. Instead, we listen to the players and there are a lot of things said in the training room that help us to understand the players and their problems.

"It takes time to get to know a player well, to feel him out, and we like to think there is no difference between the way we treat a $2 million player and one who is making $40,000.

"They want to stay on the field, that is important to their careers. That is why we try to treat everybody equally.

"The most difficult thing is to determine the extent of a muscular injury. You can't measure those injuries with an X-ray or a machine.

"And you can't measure a man's pain threshold. After you've known a player for a period of time, you can judge a lot better. You have to tell by knowing the individual.

"It's as frustrating to us as it is to the player and the ball club when you have a player who has a long-term ailment, one requiring that he go on the disabled list."

Moss, who makes his home in Peabody with his wife, Mary, and a family of four children, says there is one area of fan reaction to the players that disturbs him.

"The general public doesn't understand that these people are human beings, regardless of how much money they might make. They are asked for autographs and people want to talk with them and touch them.

"But the fans don't understand that players have the same problems as anyone else. They have members of their families in the hospital, their parents die, their cars break down, they don't feel well. They are human beings with human problems but people expect perfection from them every day without knowing what happened in the player's day. Fortunately, for us, the players like to talk — and we're there. We understand."

Zawacki has a slightly different role from Moss. A native of Easthampton, Mass., he got his BS degree in physical therapy from Ithaca College and, after an Army stint, his master's degree in exercise science from UMass-Amherst.

Rich, who lives in Dudley, has extensive experience working with handicapped children in the Belchertown and Wrentham State Schools, through Children's Hospital. He is technically a part-time Red Sox employee, spending the rest of his time working out of UMass Medical School in Worcester where Dr. Pappas is a faculty professor and Chairman of the Department of Orthopedics.

Zawacki, whose wife, Jane, delivered the couple's first child, Andrew, only recently, works the Red Sox home schedule at Fenway but does not travel with the club the way Moss does. But Rich is available when Moss and Dr. Pappas decide that a player cannot perform when the team is on the road, and the player is either left behind or sent back to Boston for treatment.

Zawacki loves his job, the sometimes long hours notwithstanding, but is glad he doesn't have to make the road trips with Moss and the ball club. And he works for Dr. Pappas on a research study that could be of great help to the players.

"It's easier to deal with professional athletes than most people because their health is paramount to their success. They are people who are highly motivated to get well if they are injured. Pushing themselves too far and too fast can be as dangerous as not doing enough. So, you have to hold back some of them, hold them down."

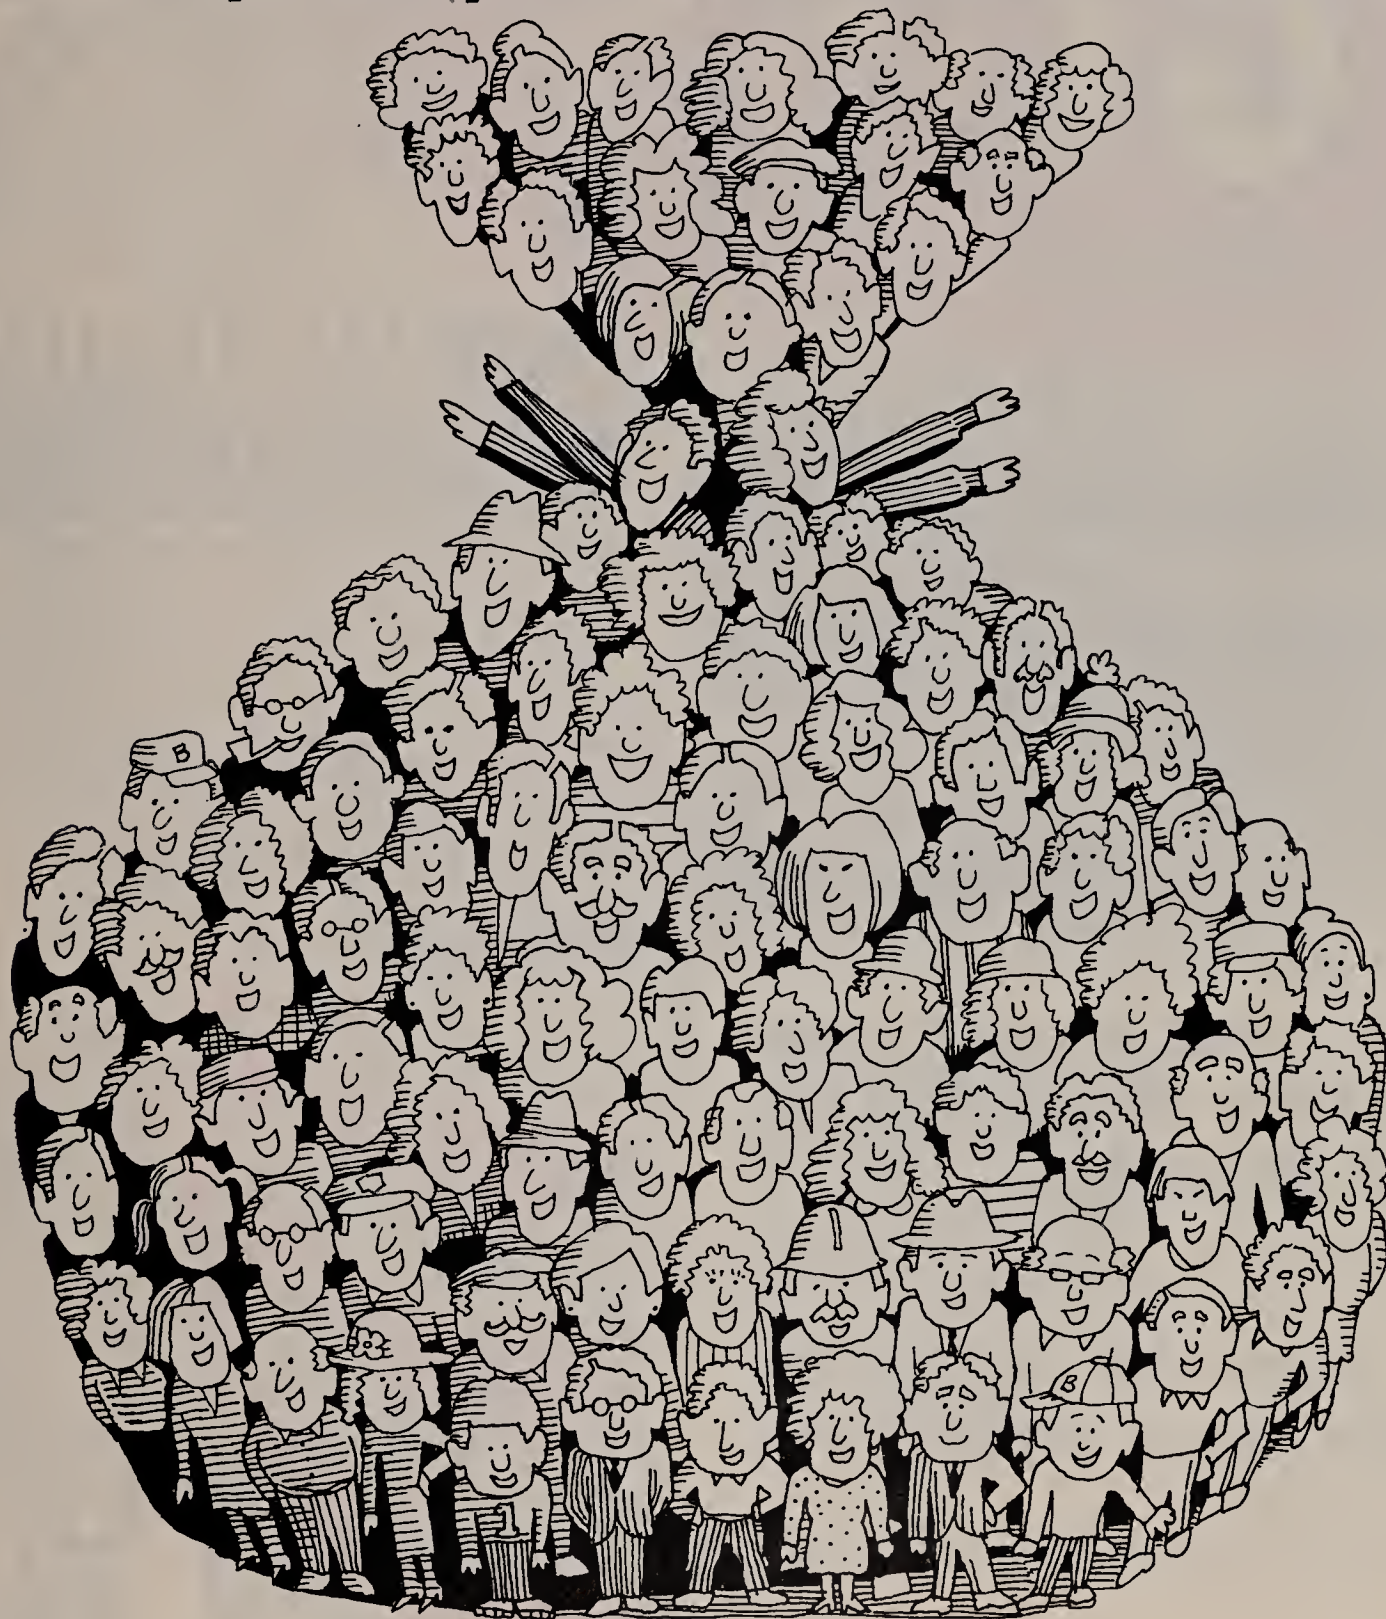

"It's important to work with the younger players in the organization, convince players at a young age to do something right now about himself, take care of himself."

Moss and Zawacki were part of the formation of a new organization, a group of professional baseball trainers, assistant trainers and physical therapists. Some 42 members have gotten together and hope to reach deep into the ranks of minor league trainers to spread the word.

In the meantime, under a research program at UMass Medical, the trainers are using computerized, high-speed filming of players in an effort to analyze and understand, at 200 frames per second, the mechanics of throwing from a physical standpoint.

"We want to devise a program that will allow players to study themselves, to understand better what they are doing by seeing everything that takes place, even things that are very subtle," Zawacki said.

Massachusetts has won over $929,730,000 in the Lottery.

If you live in Massachusetts you're a big winner in the Lottery, even if you've never bought a ticket.

Because since its beginning in 1972, the Lottery has returned over $929,730,000 to the treasuries of our cities and towns.

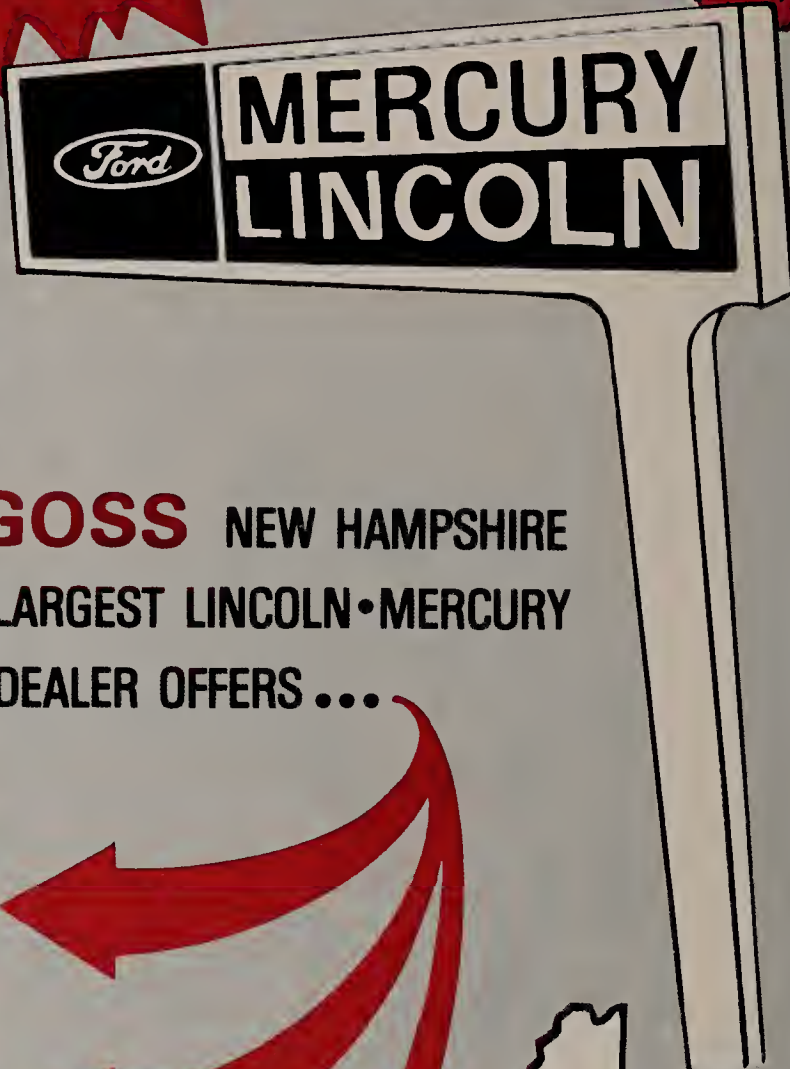

That's why the Lottery's games: Big Money, the Instant Games, the Daily Numbers Game, and Megabucks are good bets for Massachusetts.
